

U.S. Aviation services expand to include jets

Sunday, September 20, 2009

As part of a planned expansion, U.S. Aviation's Maintenance and Avionics Division has begun servicing jet aircraft.

The company is capable of handling full Phase 1 through Phase 5 inspections, as well as structural inspections of Hawker and most Cessna Citation models.

The aviation company will offer low-cost inspections on Hawkers, Citations and King Airs during the introductory expansion period.
